To whom it may concern, i am a 29 year old father of two and an avid xm radio fan/listener, i normally vote republican and consider myself quite conservative. of late i have become quite concerned with the double standards that seem to be presenting themselves in the media and society in general. I find it increasingly disturbing knowing that in a matter of a few short years the same people who set the curriculim for my childs education,will someday hire a lesbian gym teacher to show my daughter how to install a condom on a banana, are the same people who are absolutely mortified at the very thought that a dick joke might slip past the cough button at the local morning show. If this concern is so great, then why is it ok for nelly to take off all his clothes, or Ms. Elliot to smack it up, flip it down, and reverse it. while i do appreciate the governments wonderful efforts to keep Larry Flint from airing his on special brand of reality show on fox, I did not feel the need to call a congressional panel over the half second of Ms. Jackson's breast that we were exposed to on that horrible, dark January night, as i was more comfortable explaining that to my children than i was in answering questions about the fellatiatic fillibuster of Billy Jeff's lingering departure from Pennsylvania ave. In closing I would like to state that a growing number of us gen-x'ers are coming out of our collegiate liberal fog, and finding out what really matters in life. I am less offended by the occasional explanation to my daughter of an off color joke or, comment than I am of a government who believes that they can protect her innocence better than I can. If clear channel has a problem with a little competition maybe they can drop the top 40-cater-to-the-liberal-media-and-feed-the-herd-of-mindless-zombie-sheep-what-Pdiddy -and-Britney-tell-us-to- attitude, restock their playlists with decent music, then maybe people would actually listen to their scathological traffic and weather together on the ten's (between commercials for strip clubs and viagra of course). Until then, I find the paltry sum of $9.99 a month much more valuable than the crap I have to have pounded into my sub-concious just to hear what the weather and traffic will be like when i get to Chicago. Thank you for your time in this matter, and kindly keep your laws and moral obligations off of MY xm radio!

sincerely, Tony Foreman
